Loriece Boatright graduated from George Brown College in 1978 with a degree in Jewelry Arts. She developed her skills as a goldsmith working for a local jewelry store. This apprenticeship prepared Loriece to follow her dream and open a custom jewelry business.

Loriece had always been fascinated by horses. When she was invited by her friends to join their riding lessons, she jumped at the opportunity. Loriece also visited the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair in Toronto later that year in search of jewelry that celebrated the horse and equestrian lifestyle; however, surprisingly, it lacked representation.

She then shifted her entire focus, finding inspiration in all things horse from her morning hacks, working in the arena and tending the barn. Loriece literally carved, sculpted and cast these experiences into her art - pieces of fine gold and sterling silver that articulated the special relationship between the riders and their horses.

Loriece's work has always been about creating authenticity through detail. When she is in her studio working, she is in her zone—all inspirations and skills combine as one. Loriece says, "It is comparable to riding; being collected and engaging all elements to create a light and powerful flow of movement and beauty. At that very moment, the horse and rider are one."

The various disciplines of horsemanship offer Loriece an unlimited resource to create from; however, it is the custom orders that feed her creative soul. From the very first riding lesson, Loriece states, "I became a transitive medium, capturing the customer's imagination to create an artistic piece of jewelry that will tell their story and leave a lasting impression for generations to pass down."

The Spirit Horse

I was inspired to create this pendant after visiting Sedona, Arizona. Hidden in the mane of the horse, is an Eagles' wing. This symbol represents courage in Native American culture. Wear this in the spirit of the horse – be courageous!

The Spirit Horse Protection Pendant

For centuries, turquoise has been recognized as possessing the power to protect riders. Historically, soldiers would attach turquoise to their horses' bridles for protection against injury due to falls. (Genuine turquoise from New Mexico & Sterling Silver)
